On last Sanday she accepted an invitation to ride out with him, and in the course of the ride young Benn begged her to marry him. Miss Knapp, however, declined to make an engagement, and he returned home much disheartened. Early on Monday morning he went to Callicoon, bought some poison and a small revolver. Then he went to the lonely spot where his body was found, drank the acid and fired three bullets into his head.

He left a letter in his pocket addressed to Katy Knapp saying that life had no charms for him apart from her, and bidding her farewell

CHUSETTS. But the Endorsement Does Not Extend to Siy Secretary Litchman-Painters and Shocmakers Leave District Assembly 30. FALL RIVER, July 20 .- That the Powderly administration has a firm grip on depleted District Assembly 30 was conclusively proven at to-day's session of the District Convention. The sly and energetic little Secretary of the General Executive Board, Charles H. Litchman, has fulfilled what was expected of him by the Board. The Committee on Resolutions created a sensation by bringing in the following:

Whereas, It is understood that General Master Workman l'owderly at the coming Convention will resign bis office as General Master Workman or refuse to accept an election; and Whereas, The best and vital interests of the order require that he should remain at its head: therefore, be it Resolves, That District Assembly No. 30 hereby in-structs its delegates to the Minneapolis Convention to refuse to accept the resignation of General Master Workman Powderly, and to do all in their power to re-tain him at the head of the order.

Mr. Litchman seconded the motion to adopt the resolution.

Delegate Jesse H. Jones of Abingdon spoke in favor of it. He vividly pictured the demoralizing effect of the dethronement of Mr. Powderly upon the Catholic members of the order, and fervently urged the delegates to retain him, and thus prevent the election of a radical, who might antagonize the religious element. Delegate D. F. Moreland of Woburn also strongly supported the resolution. Mr. George E McNeil, the leader of the opposition, was not present when the resolution was offered. He came in just as it was adopted by a two-thirds vote. General Secretary Litchman immediately moved a reconsideration of the vote so as to prevent the reintroduction of the subject at this Convention. Mr. McNiel spoke for a reconsideration, and with James Mellen, editor of the Worcester Daily limes, entered a protest against the resolution. But the Litchman faction prevailed.

The endorsement of Powderly's administration, however, does not mean the endorsement of all the members of the Executive Board. In fact, some of the delegates aveathat they voted for Powderly alone and not for the administration. Resolutions similar to that adopted to-day, and, it is delared, formulated by Litchman himself, will doubtless be presented at all meetings of infuential districts.

It is safe to say that Mr. Powderly will not rosign his lucrative position, but will hold on to it until October, 1888, as he is entitled to do under the new constitution.

The anti-administration party are hopeful, notwithstanding their defeat to-day.

They say that one district meeting does not mean Powderly forever any more than one swallow makes a summer.

The probabilities to-night point to the election of new men as delegates to the National Convention. All those who have been prominent in the factional fight in the order will be kept at home. Both Litchman and McNiel will be candidates, but it is doubtful whether either will be elected. The opposition to Litchman is pronounced, even among those who voted for the Powderly resolution, so that the endorsement of the General Master Workman is properly not construed to include Mr. Litchman is properly not construed to include Mr. Litchman, but is meant to take in A. A. Carleton.

Whether or not the Executive Board, partially through the agency of this district, will rotain its great power, is not of so much concern to the delegates here as whether this district will survive or fall.

The painters' local assembly, consisting of $600 members, were permitted to withdraw to-day to form a trades district. National Master Workman Skeffington probably will be allowed fo-day to take out the shoemakers. This will materially reduce the membership of the district. There is no disguising the fact that the tendency among the skilled workmen is for independent district organizations. There will be little or no effort to prevent any trades district: that is, if it has paid all dues and The endorsement of Powderly's administration, however, does not mean the endorsement

The morning session of the Convention was The morning session of the Convention was taken up with the discussion of the great lockout of the Worcester county sheemakers, who fought their employers from January till June, and were then ordered back to work by the Executive Board. It was thought that the victimized members would not be supported, but the matter was referred to the Executive Board, which voted to sustain them. The most meagre reports are furnished to the press, but it is understood that there was vigorous objection to the $50,000 expenses incurred in the lockout, and that harmony does not exist on that subject.

Mr. Skeffington, who leads the forces of the shoemakers, made sweeping accusations against the general management. The only real fight will be over the election of delegates, in which the administration and anti-administration factions will figure.

TO REFORM THE KNIGHTS.

Inducatial Members will Try to Have a New Constitution Adopted.

Washington, July 20 .- A secret conference of leading Knights of Labor was recently held in the East which was attended by some o the most prominent members of the order. This address was prepared and is now being distributed to Knights of Labor in all sections of the country:

To the Knights of Labor, Greeting . It is a well-known fact that, owing to the wide departure of the order from the fundamental principles upon which the Knights of Labor was founded, there has wen a large decrease in its membership, and, believing that unless the General Assembly, which meets in Octo ber in Minneapolis, takes measures to reestablish the ascendancy of those principles, there will be still further defections that will seriously impair. If not destroy, the sefulness of the order, we take this means of protesting altered, its fundamental principles nutlified, new officers created, salaries increased, expenditures made, and as seements levied without authority of the members, as provided by the constitution, thereby leading to oli-garchic rule and to the dissatisfaction of those earnest advocates of the cause of labor, who had hoped to find in this order a means of checking the irresponsible rule of privileged classes, commonly known as monopolica.

POUGHKEEPSIE, July 20 .- Eleven months ago a Polish Jew named Louis Keptlovwitch arrived in this county from his Russian home. During the winter he visited Wappinger's Falls and secured a situation in the print works. He soon established for himself a home, and engaged the services of a Newburgh Hebrew women as housekeeper. For a time everything went on smoothly, but finally gossips began to use the names of the man and woman in a manner most unpleasant. This state of things caused Keptlovwitch to seek the advice of friends, and he proposed to his advisers the idea of marriage to the housekeeper. They immediately coincided with him, ignorant of anything that should prevent the union. Accordingly, on May 4 last the pair, accom-panied by two or three friends, called on the Rev. A. W. McGibbon of that village. who married Louis to the housekeeper. Louis gave his name, however, as Louis Veensteen. The housekeeper's name was Delenska Becka. In Russia at this time there lived a young woman bearing the name of Mrs. Louis Keptlowitch, and with her a bright little child whose father was Louis Keptlowitch, alias Veensteen. Not hearing from Louis, the wife and mother determined to come here with her child and search him out. Accordingly she arrived here yesterday. She went to Mr. Rosenburg, the talior, at 199 Main street, made known her case, and through his assistance the matter was placed in the hands of the police. Officer Decker proceeded to Wappinger's Falls, where he arrested the truant husband. The prisoner was brought before Recorder Dorland to-day. The prisoner acknowledged both wives, but pleaded ignorance. Both wives talked to him at once, the first with pity and disgust plainly shown on her face, while the second and unlawful wife heaped on him words of condemnation. The prisoner was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., July 20.—A new and strange complication has been added to the mysterious case of Luella Mabitt, who is supposed to have been murdered by Amor Green, who was recently captured and brought to this city. To-day the discovery was made by a visit to the vault in Spring Vale Cemetery that the head is missing from the body of Miss Mabitt. Two months ago William Mabitt, father of the dead girl, gave a Lafayette dentist permission to take a cast of her head for future use, Mr. Mabitt now professed ignorance as to the whereabouts of the severed head. At a meeting of the State Dental Association of Indiana several weeks ago the Lafayette dentist displayed to the association a jawbone, which he said was faken from the head of Miss Mabitt. The excitement over the capture of the Green brothers remains unabated. An organization of 300 men has been perfected in the Mabitt settlement, and several hundred citizens gathered last night and hanged Bill and Amor Green in effigy. Mr. Mabitt has had an interview with Amor Green, the alleged murderer of his daughter. Green declined to give him the slightest satisfaction as to the terrible ending of his daughter's life, saying that all would be made plain at the proper time, evidently intending to impress upon the father that his daughter was yet alive.

THE ATLANTA'S GREAT GUNS.

Did the Clips Fail Because the Ship's Sides were Not Stiff Enough?

WASHINGTON, July 20 .- A report received at the Navy Department to-day from the Commander of the new cruiser Atlanta says that when the eight-inch rifles were fired recently at Gardiner's Bay, with charges intended to impart a velocity of 2,000 feet to the projectile. the clips and clip circles failed to hold the carriages satisfactorily. The clips of two of the six-inch guns also failed to hold the carriages unon firing. These carriages and their appliances worked satisfactorily upon trial at the proving grounds, the eight-inch gun being fired at least twenty times with heavy charges. The conditions under which guns are fired on shipboard, however, are materially different from those at the proving tests, and in this instance officers of the Ordnance Bureau say that the failure of the fastenings may have resulted in large part from the spring of the arched deck and steel sides of the vessel. This is supposed to be particularly true in the case of the six-inch guns, and the unfavorable result of the trial of these guns confirms the ordnance officers in their opinion that an "ordnance ship" for the trial affoat of new guns is an absolute necessity. In this case the damage appears from the report to have been confined to the failure of the clips and circles, but it will take some time to replace them with heavier fittings. Meantime a Board of survey will be ordered to ascertain officially the facts in the case. riages satisfactorily. The clips of two of the

The city authorities have never been able cither to collect a license or break up his business, but the United States Government did find a way to deal with the nuisance by fining Black Jack $200 on two separate charges of falling to display harbor lights on the El Tempo and another old hulk which he used as an annex.

One of these fines bind been paid, but the second was in default. Supplied with the second was in default. Supplied with the proper capiers. Capit Baker this afternoon seized the annex bumboat and towed it into a slip. Yattaw stood on the deck of the El Tempo and jeered the gunboat as she made the first trip, but was greatly surprised when the Andy Johnson returned and made fast to the El Tempo. He was told he could have five minutes to pay the second fine. When the time was up the bumboat was towed off.

Yattaw had provided himself with about twenty rifles and revolvers and a number of his tough friends to handle them, but he weakened when he saw the muzzle of the rifled Dabigren gun trained directly on his craft and a plateon of marines drawn up on deck with repeating Winchesters ready for use. This ends Black Jack and his bumboat.

CRUEL TREATMENT AND A PRETTY SER-

Supt. Osborne of the French Cable Company Accused by his Wife-Her Grandfather's Bonds and her Husband's Love Both Lost in the Manhattan Bank Robbery.

Papers filed yesterday in the suit of Mary Agnes Osborne against Hugh Osborne make a dismal end of a love match of a dozen years ago between a bright young Irish telegraph operator and a beautiful girl with an unusually fine voice, finely cultivated, a Paris education, a wealthy grandfather, and other accomplishments that placed her in a social rank in this city a grade above that of the man she married. The suit is for a limited divorce, and the complaint charges brutal beatings and other abuse for many years and an affair with a pretty young Cape Breton servant girl.

Deputy Grand Dictator in the room of the Williamsburgh Lodge on Thursday night rolling up their charter. They were indignant. Those who are in sympathy with the suspended lodge say cooperative insurance in Brooklyn has received a big blow. "We acknowledge," one of them said, "that the Grand Lodge officers, as far as the law of the order goes, were right in suspending the Williamsburgh Lodge, but they should have let the affair pass by. It's the law, I know, that all printed circulars issued by lodges should first receive the sanction of the order. We members of the Williamsburgh Lodge know the cause of all this. There is a deep feeling of camity between Grand Dictator Dowe and Mr. W. Bryan, one of our members. It dates away back to when they came together in the Legion of Honor, of which organization both these men were members."

All Mr. Bryan, who is a Bedford avenue undertaker, would say was; "His act was beastly."

In the circular from the Supreme Lodge to bring about a discussion of which the Williamsburgh lodge issued the circular which resulted in its suspension two suggestions were made. One was that each lodge should pay to the Supreme Lodge a special per capita tax of ten cents to carry on the work of extending the order, and the other was that the holders of benefit certificates made payable to others than relatives should forward the same to have the beneficiaries changed. The wife was Agnes Mary Holbrook before she married, and her mother's father was Henry Haves, an Englishman, for many years head of the Herald's College, and one of the family of that name who have for several generations kept a famous music exchange in London. Mr. Hayes had the bulk of a large property in Government bonds, which were de-posited in the Manhattan Bank for safe keeping. Miss Holbrook was educated at well-known institutions in this country, and had then been three years at Paris, and was about to spend some further time in Germany completing her education, when she met Osborne at the home of a schoolmate in this city, fell in love with him, and after awhile married him. He was of a schoolmate in this city, fell in love with him, and after awhile married him. He was then an operator in the office of the Direct Cable Company in this city. Soon after the marriage he went to Europe, having stations in cable service at London and Liverpool. Afterward he was stationed at 48. Pierre, Newfoundland. Ever since the French Cable Company began business he has been in its employ, and for several years has been its superintendent, with offices at North Eastham, Cape Cod. Where he is now stationed.

The bonds of Henry Hayes were among those stoien in the famous Manhattan Bank rob ey. They were unregistered and were their ore a total loss. Mrs. Osborne alleges that immediately upon the discovery of this decrease in the cash value of his wife as a futurity, her husband began the course of illtreatment which has driven her to this suit, and "to such desperation that had it not have been for her poor innocent children she would have ended her life with her own hands."

In the allegations filed for her by Robert Greenthal, her counsel, she specifies as instances of his cruelty that in September, 1855, he knocked her down and struck her violently with his clenched fist, and that on April 3, 1886, she suffered from him violent blows on the head with his fist. After this, Mrs. Osborne says, though it is not set out in the complaint, she left his house and remained with her mother in this city until August, when a reconciliation was effected, and she went back to Cape Cod to look after the children while he went to Europe on a vacation.

On May 9, 1887, the complaint says, she was beaten so that the sears remained on ner body for nine days. In this case, Mrs. Osborne says, she had neglected his order to light the fire in the morning, and he went out into the yard, out a heavy switch, and lashed her over the back as she knelt before the stove. She was so bruised that she could not raise one arm for several days.

The complaint continues that on Jan. 3, 1887, he struck her in the eye, inflicting injuries that

Friends of Osborne in this city, including some who had known him at the time of his marriage, were astonished yesterday at the charges made by his wife. One who has known him most lately said that it was most unlikely that he would have been guilty of such conuct, and said that for several years there had been some question among friends of the couple as to Mrs. Osborne's sanity. There is no trace of insanity in her appearance or manner.

. THE YACHT RAMBLER SOLD.

One of the Fastest Schooners in the World Goes for Less Than her Value as Junk. The schooner yacht Rambler, one of the swiftest schooners in the world, was sold at auction yesterday by Montgomery & Co. for the executors of the estate of the late Commodore W. H. Thomas, who was her last owner. She was bid in at $4.800 by a broker for an Eastern yachtsman, whose name was refused. She was really worth a good deal more as junk than the price named, for in addition to thirty tons of lead ballast she was well equipped in the matter of extra sails, anohor and chains, spare rigging, and cabin and galley fixings and furnishings. She is now lying in South Brooklyn.

spare rigging, and cabin and galley livings and furnishings. She is now lying in South Brooklyn.

The Rambler was built by E. P. Beckwith at New London in 1871 for Mr. J. H. Bancker. She was originally 120 feet 5 inches over all, 105 feet 7 inches water line, 25 feet beam, 9 feet 6 inches deep, and 10 feet 8 inches draught. When Mr. Thomas bought her he had a new bow built on her, making her 18 feet 6 inches longer over all and 22 feet 11 inches longer on the water line. She was also deepened one inch, and her draught was increased nine inches. It did not improve her much, but she was still a remarkably fast boat. She sailed two races for the Brenton's Reef Cup in 1872, and won both.

It was said at the time of the Coronet-Dauntless race that a well-known yachtsman was going to buy her and enter the race. The yachtsmen say that if it had been done she would have landed at Queenstown winner of $20,000. As it would have cost only about $16,000 to get there, it would have been a good speculation, as well as a good sperting event. The sale did not draw a very large crowd.

Bulgarin's Soldiers do not Want Ferdinand as their Ruler-A German Goes to France to Kill a Government Officer-Evictions. LONDON, July 20 .- Mr. Parnell and many of his colleagues were entertained this evening at a banquet by the National Liberal Club. The health of the Queen was proposed by Mr. Dillwyn, and the guests all rose decorously and Gladstone for having put his shoulder to the wheel, and said that before many months the ex-Premier would carry his policy and be recognized as the only great man in British tention were tempters, imitators, and tinkers. would be contented to see the Government march up the hill and then march down again. The recent elections had forced them to make concessions or resign.

The English Liberals might be assured that their exertions would not be wasted. Although in Ireland extreme misery had been suffered during the past eighteen months, crime had diminished and the people had turned to condiminished and the people had turned to constitutional methods of adjusting their grievances instead of to physical force. The Liberals might claim therein a great success, for the people recognized that through their exertions the way had been opened to an honorable union. If the Liberals falled in their programme their great reward would be that they had banished violence, outrage, and revenge and brought the nation to depend upon lawful methods of redress. If the Government honestly and fairly tried to carry out the amendments to the Land bill, and if the execution thereof was in no way frustrated, they would never have to use the Coercion bill, which would become a standing memorial of the time which the Tory Government of 1887 had wasted. The diminuion of crime proved the gratitude of the Irish toward the Liberals, and he trusted that the Irish would long rely upon the good feeling of the Liberals, that even when oppressed, trampled upon, and evicted, they would retailate slowly. They should remember that the Tory Government would not last forever. We will begin an investigation pretty soon, and whoever it was that put the poison in the feed will be punished."

Veterinary Surgeon James McCaffrey said yesterday: "Cyanide of potassium is an unusual poison for any one to have who is employed around a stable. It is much in use by photographers and in photograph galleries. I believe that the person who administered the poison was not an expert, but some bungler, else he could easily have killed of the whole twenty-three horses. The horses that died were killed in a few minutes. The others showed the effect at once by their dropolng in their stalls and swaying from side to side."

The man was taken out of the river before life was extinct and taken to Gouverneur Hospital, where he died, although heroic efforts were made to resuscitate him. In response to a question he said, soon before he died, that his name was Cahill or Carroll. He died of alcoholism and submersion. After death the body was removed to the Morgne, having been dirst stripped of the uniform, which was retained at the hospital. It was supposed the uniform was that of a marine, and Colonel Heywood, in command at the marine barracks, was notified. He sent for the body, and after the usual formalities it was delivered over to him. It was in an advanced stage of decomposition, and Colonel Heywood ordered it buried at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning, the Colonel and all others at the barracks supposing it to be that of the missing marine, as there had been delay in getting the uniform from the hospital. In the mean time the missing marine, who was officially a dead man and a buried man, turned up unofficially as a very live man, only with rather a beery head. Then the uniform was obtained and the marine, who was somewhat bewildered with the mortuary turn things had taken during his brief dash into a sporting life, was officially informed that the marine folks had probably buried one of the David's Island soldiers.

GRAHAM BESTS FRAZIER.

The Champion Feather Weight of New Jersey Laid Out by a New Yorker. A skin-tight glove fight between Young

Frazier, champion feather weight of New Jersey, and Eddie Graham of New York city, who has been unknown in the sporting world until now, was fought last night in a sporting resort north of New York for a purse of $500. It was a rattling fight of twenty rounds, and the New Yorker fought the champion to a finish. Sixty well-known sporting men paid $5 each to see the contest. Frazier is 23 years old, is 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighs 127 pounds. Graham is 19 years old, his weight 120 pounds, and he is 5 feet 6% inches tall. Frazier's second was Joe Whistler, and Graham's second George McArthur, his trainer and the middle-weight champion of Montreal. The contest between the principals was diversified in the seventh round by a smart scrap between the seconds, in which the Mon-

was diversified in the seventh round by a smart scrap between the seconds, in which the Montreal middle weight punched Whistler's nose, and was prevented from using him up only by the interference of the referee.

Frazier and Graham sparred cautiously for an opening for the first two rounds, and in the third round Graham led with his left, catching Frazier on the mouth and drawing first blood, which was allowed. The round ended with betting in favor of the New York man. For the next four rounds Graham went for Frazier's ribs and Frazier pounded Graham's head.

In the seventh round Frazier got in his first clean blow, catching Graham on the point of the jaw with his right and knocking him down. Whistler, Frazier's second, stood over Graham and tried to prevent him from protecting himself. McArthur, Graham's second, remonstrated. Whistler struck at McArthur and McArthur ducked to avoid the blow. Rising quickly, McArthur deait Whistler a stinger between the eyes, drawing blood, and then followed him up and pummelled him about the head until the roferee stepped between the seconds. Whistler resigned as second and Frazier's brother John took his place. Then the principals took their turn at fighting.

In the eighth round Graham sent Frazier in a heap to his corner with a heavy left hander in the stomach. For four rounds both men spaired to got wind. The fifteenth round was an exciting one. The men got to close quarters, and each tried to knock the other out, Frazier was bleeding profusely, but Graham appeared not to have a scratch on him.

A SHORT-LIVED HONEYMOON.

W. H. LADEN SHOOTS HIS BRIDE AND HER MOTHER AND KILLS HIMSELF.

The Crime of a Bridegroom of a Fortnight, who was Crazed by Brink - The Wife will Recover-The Mother-in-law May Die.

William H. Laden, who had only been married a fortnight, shot his wife, his mothern-law, and himself at 7% last evening in his home at 106 East 109th street. All three were taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, and Laden died there at twenty minutes after 9 last evening. His mother-in-law, Mrs. P. Wright, is seriously wounded in the left side, the ball, which was fired from a 32-calibre five-shopter revolver, having entered her side and penetrated the lung. Her recovery is doubtful. Mrs. Laden, the wife, is slightly wounded in the left shoulder blade, and will get well in a comparatively short time.

Laden was 30 years of age and his wife ten years younger. It would seem that since their marriage, two weeks ago, the two have hardly known a happy day. They lived with Mrs. Laden's family, occupying the front room of the flat on the first floor and boarding with H. P. Wright, the father of the young wife and the husband of the mother-in-law, who is likely to die. Mr. Wright is an engine cleaner on the Third avenue elevated railway. He worked die. Mr. Wright is an engine cleaner on the Third avenue elevated railway. He worked nights. Laden was a carpenter by trade, and before his marriage boarded with the Wrights. There were two girls in the family, Mary and Ida, and Laden made love to Mary, the elder, and won her, though she knew and her parents knew at the time that Laden was inclined to be dissipated. He promised, however, to reform, and the marriage went on. Immediately after it Laden abandoned work and got drunk, and kopt drunk during the two weeks prior to the tragedy of last night. His actions had been so odd during the day that Engineer Wright hesitated about leaving his family last evening to go to his work. He did go finally, however, leaving Laden alone with the three women—his mother-in-law, Mrs. Laden, and her sister Ida. Laden began asking for money as soon as his father-in-law had left. His wife refused to give him any, and he said he would pawn his overcoat, and this his wife said he should not do.

Laden then drew the revolver. His wife screamed and turned to run. While her back was turned to him Laden shot her. She continued on into the hall and down to the house-keeper's room on the street floor.

Mrs. Wright, on hearing the shot and her daughter's screams, ran to the front room, and was met by the buillet from Laden fred two shots at her, one of which missed, the other taking effect as above related. She fell to the floor, and then Laden put the muzzle of the pistol to his right temple and sent a bail into his brain. He never recovered consciousness, and was dying on the floor where he fell when the ambulance surgeon arrived.

A Report by way of Canada that he Salled from New York on Saturday.

It was rumored in this city yesterday that ex-Alderman McCabe, who escaped trial as one of the boodlers by being declared a lunatic, was in Canada with his wife. Inquiry in this city failed to confirm the report, but McCabe's counsel said that if he had gone to Canada he had the same right as another citizen to go where he pleased. He said that McCabe was not in a condition of mind to realize his position, and that if he were sane he would never think of running away.

A despatch from The Sun's correspondent at Hamilton, Ont., received last night said that a well-known young barrister of that city, a cousin of McCabe, had just returned from New York, where he saw McCabe on last Friday. He said that McCabe then told him that he was going to sail for Europe on Saturday on the Anchor line steamship Ethiopia. No such name appears in the Ethiopia's passenger list.

This gentleman said positively that McCabe had not gone to Canada, and the local Canadian reporters who have been searching for him are confident that he is not there. not in a condition of mind to realize his po-

The Metropolitan Storage Company Will

They said that the owners of the destroyed property on storage might not in many cases desire to have their losses become known. There cases desire to have their losses become known. There was no way of ascertaining what losers were willing and what were unwilling to have their names given, as they are exettered in all parts of the world. Mr. Winterbotton of the company said that this course was decided upon because a great many of the customers, who are in the city and accessible, have already signified a desire that their names shall be withheld in the report of the losses. In some cases this is merely the result of an objection to the notoriety, and in others there are more substantial reasons for the concealment of the facts.
